Crossing Confessional Boundaries

Arguably the single most important element in Abrahamic cross-confessional relations has been an ongoing spiritual and ethical exchange of one-mother’s communities. Ranging from Late Antiquity through the Middle Ages, Crossing Confessional Boundaries explores the complex roles played by saints, sages, and Friends of God in the communal and intercommunal lives of Christian, Jewish, and Muslim communities across the Mediterranean world, from Spain and North Africa to the Middle East to the Balkans. By examining these stories in their broad institutional, social, and cultural contexts, Crossing Confessional Boundaries reveals unique theological insights into the interlocking histories of the Abrahamic faiths.

Continental and Mediterranean Imports to Atlantic Britain and Ireland, AD 400-800

Kevin Campbell 2007

From the 4th to 8th centuries AD was a flourishing trade network linking the Atlantic coast of Britain and Ireland to the Mediterranean and north-west Europe, bringing imported pottery and glass as well as new ideas from these areas. New materials in often bound to new excavations, and it is now recognised that imports from Europe and the Mediterranean are widespread and more diverse than previously believed. This is the first comprehensive account of this material, and is invaluable to scholars in a range of fields. Around 800 vessels from 135 sites are described, including fine tablewares, drinking vessels and transport containers for luxuries such as dyestuffs, nuts, wine and olive oil. Finds from some of the most ornate and complex objects ever found in Britain, artefacts that condense and embody many histories.
