Mapping Tokyo in Fiction and Film-Barbara E. Thornbury 2020-01-30 Mapping Tokyo in Fiction and Film explores ways that late 20th- and early 21st- century fiction and film from Japan literally and figuratively map Tokyo. The four dozen novels, stories, and films discussed here describe, define, and reflect on Tokyo urban space. They are part of the flow of Japanese-language texts being translated (or, in the case of film, subtitled) into English. Circulation in professionally translated and subtitled English-language versions helps ensure accessibility to the primarily anglophone readers of this study—and helps validate inclusion in lists of world literature and film. Tokyo’s well-established culture of mapping signifies much more than a profound attachment to place or an affinity for maps as artifacts. It is, importantly, a counter-response to feelings of insecurity and disconnection—insofar as the mapping process helps impart a sense of predictability, stability, and placeness in the real and imagined city.

male directors like Lars von Trier and Aki Kaurismäki have continued to generate a lot of public and scholarly interest for their willingness to push aesthetical, political and ethical borders. Exposing Vulnerability calls attention to the increasing number of Scandinavian films in which women directors film themselves and their close ones in order to take up the most pressing contemporary problems such as mental illnesses, bullying, the traumas of migration and racism. The book investigates the aesthetics, politics and ethics of these films.
