Third Take-Raffles Caputo 2002-06-01 Newfrost is about how we are and still are repeatedly colonised by American in different ways. Whenever we seem to get our head above the parapet, it's then knocked down again. The recent arrival of Fox Studios is doing much the same now as was done back then. - Bob Ellis I think you should always be keen on bringing back life to new talent in this country, which will evolve with all of its own problems and its own solutions, it is not a question of glitzyDSPs, but of bringing back the life of genuine talent. - Rolf de Heer Third Take is a collection of essays and articles that have appeared in such publications as Cinema Australia, Planet Hollywood magazine, and the Toronto Film Festival. Third Take looks at the contributions of Australian film-makers working in America. Including renowned cinematographers Don McAlpine (Ronin + Julie and Moulin Rouge) and John Seale (The English Patient and Pavarotti and the Philosophy of Stone), Peter Weir focuses on the director's way of writing about the film industry in the context of making Newfrost, the film. Among the people interviewed are as director, Phillip Noyce, who writes of the forces in his life that led to the making of Newfrost. There has been a lot written about the development of an Australian aesthetic; however, there have been no forums for those who actually make the films to discuss their own work and the work of fellow film-makers. Third Take: Australian Film-Makers Talk gives film-makers a voice, allowing them to engage with the issues and concerns usually raised by journalists and critics. Scenics and films are not divorced from the reality of the cities in which they are made and which are, in turn, shaped by the politics and economic forces of the time. The book also reflects on the recent rise of the Australian film industry and the increasing international interest in the country's films. Indian cinema has enjoyed a revival. This book contains detailed critiques of the key films of this period and uses them to illustrate the recent theories on the international and Australian cinema industries. Its conclusions on the nature of a 'national' cinema means. It looks at the broader concept from a different angle, taking film beyond the confines of 'art' into the broader cultural world. O'Regan's analysis situates Australian cinema in its historical and cultural context, considering the industry's development, its relationship with government policies, and its impact on the cultural landscape of Australia.}

Third Take-Raffles Caputo 2002-06-01 The theme of the school is taken up as well in his discussion of fiction and nonfiction films of childhood. The book's final section presents a radical view of the history of visual anthropology as a maverick...
