This fourth edition has been fully revised and expanded to include even more acts than ever before, with additional sections to cover Band Aid-style charity compilations and compilation albums from the early '80s K-Tel efforts through to the Now That's What I Call Music series and its competitors. One Hundred Daffodils-Rebecca Wins 2023-03-24 An engaging, wise, and uplifting reflection on human resilience and nature's ability to teach, inspire, and heal after an unexpected life upheaval. One Hundred Daffodils is told through the lens of the author's personal experiences with grief and heartbreak on her journey toward self-discovery and empowerment. One Hundred Daffodils chronicles the author's search for identity at the end of her twenty-five year marriage when she takes an ending she didn't expect and turns it into an opportunity to redefine a future that is truly her own. Facilitated in measure by a love affair with a much younger man, a deep dive into global spiritual practices and Jungian psychology, and the observational eye of a John Muir-like naturalist, the author finds clues, messages, and even answers through communion with the divine in nature, and the deep wisdom of the mystery. Written with vulnerability, pathos, humor, and raw honesty, One Hundred Daffodils shows us what is possible when we are willing to look at our unvarnished selves with an open mind, and see others with an open heart, particularly those we blame. Like Hermann Hesse, Walt Whitman, and Mary Oliver before her, the author uses nature and the garden as a metaphor, a sanctuary, and a trusted teacher. It is a contemporary yet timeless story of a woman's search for meaning, identity, and purpose.

African Literature and Social Change-Okwukon George 2017-10-16 Alert to the ways in which critical theory and imaginative literature can enrich each other, African Literature and Social Change reframes the ongoing project of African literature. Concentrating on texts that are not usually considered together — writings by little-known black missionaries, so called “black whiteness,” and better-known 20th century intellectuals and creative writers — Okwukon George shows the ways in which these writings have addressed notions of ethnicity, nation, and race and how the debates need to be rehistoriographed today. George presents Africa as a site of complex desires and contradictions, refashioning the way African literature is positioned within current discussions of globalism, diaspora, and postcolonialism.
