Autism Potty Training in 3 Days-Ash Bhattacharya 2018-03-08 Wondering how to Toilet train any child with Autism in just 3 Days? Download this book to learn how to use the following 3 strategies to Potty train children with Autism real quick: - Visual Schedules - Task Management - Positive Reinforcement

Autism is a complex spectrum condition and most people do not understand is that not two children with Autism are exactly the same. What works wonders for one child may in fact, be counter-productive to another. The same applies to Potty Training with Autism - there is no "One Size Fits All" potty training guide for potty training your child with Autism. Have you wondered Why your child with Autism is not yet potty trained while other kids of similar age have been out of their nappies all summer? Most children with Autism face some common challenges which could be one or more of the following: - Sensory Sensitivities - Communication Challenges - Self Confidence

So what happens when your child is not potty trained on time? Delaying potty training has both social and health hazards. Imagine taking out child out in a public place (a shopping mall or a nice restaurant) only to realise that your child couldn’t hold it any longer. BUT the biggest risk of all is that research have shown that for children who are not potty trained on time, tend to start losing their ability to control bowel movements. What that means is, after a certain point in your child’s age, it is going to become increasingly difficult to get them potty trained - Do you really want to be in that situation? Enough of bad news, now lets talk about the world of opportunities. According to Autism Researchers, 8 out of 10 children with ADHD or Autism react positively to one or more of the following methods of communication and teaching: Visual Boards: Children with Autism and ADHD are able to process information pictorially - often much better than typically developing children. Task Management: By breaking up a complex task into smaller activities, children with Autism and ADHD become more adept at completing a task, which in this case is Potty Training. For a child with Autism, normal tasks could seem highly complicated. For example, lets assume you are told to build a house. How would you feel about that. You wouldn’t even know where to start and finish. Instead if I were to break it up to you into steps like: - Design your house on paper - Dig the foundation - Lay the bricks - Do the roofing and - Paint the housewould you not feel much better? You know that by taking smaller steps at a time, and with the right guidance and support from family and friends, you actually build something like that. Also, completing these sub-tasks and kicking the goals as you go, gives you a sense of satisfaction as you see your dream house unfold. This is exactly how your child feels when you implement task management. Positive Reinforcements: Positive Reinforcement is what we try to give instructions to your child in an assertive tone and try to follow that instruction, you offer them a reward - like a chocolate, cookies, stickers, a book - whatever works for your child: ). Now, let me ask you this. Using these 3 strategies, don’t you believe you can fully potty train your child in less than 7 days? If not, don’t worry. We will show you exactly how in this step by step guide.

Autonomy Vs Shame and Doubt

In order to achieve this autonomy in children, it is important that parents let the children do things on their own. This means not being too overprotective and certainly not shaming the child whenever there was a mistake. The result of the way parents treat their children in the potty training process can greatly influence the child's autonomy. If parents are too strict and punish their children for mistakes, the child will feel ashamed and may develop doubts about their abilities. On the other hand, if parents are patient and encouraging, the child will feel more confident and will be more likely to try new things.

How do you get your toddler to use the potty independently without raising a fuss? Potty training is a very important topic, just ask the mom of any toddler. This is one issue that has taken several parents a tough time, yet if you do a quick search online, there is no end to claims that you can get your little one potty trained in a couple of days or less. If you are struggling with training your toddler to use the potty and it is not yielding a lot of success, the temptation is to think that there is something wrong with you. Or with your child. If those thoughts are sneaking into your consciousness, then this is the time to resist temptation. There is likely nothing wrong with either you or your child. So how exactly are you supposed to potty train your child? That is a question that might be running through your mind, and it is a good one. The fact is that there are many methods to potty training and the one that will work for your demands largely on your child. It is easy to assume that a parent just automatically knows how to toilet train a child. But, it does not work that way. As a parent, it is important to learn how to do things properly. Of course, there are those who just intuitively know how to go about the potty training business and some children who just automatically start using the toilet by themselves. However, these are the exception and you probably don't know anyone like that. In fact, you probably don't know anyone like that. What most people do is learn about the different methods of potty training and then pick the one that suits their child's temperament and personality. What works for one child might not work for his sister. So understanding your child is imperative for successful toilet training. What does not work though, is shaming and mocking your child whenever accidents happen. This can have far-reaching negative effects on your child. The psychologist, Erikson believed that potty training was one of the eight important stages in the psychosocial development of a person. In particular, that toilet training was the most important stage between the ages 1 and 2. He believed that it was an event that led to self-confidence and self-control in a child, breeding greater freedom and the ability to do things on their own. Autonomy Vs Shame and Doubt In order to achieve this autonomy in children, it is important that parents let the children do things on their own. This means not being too overprotective and certainly not shaming the child whenever there was a mistake. The result of the way you react to your child during this stage has a great significance on the child's world view later on. Whether your child goes on to become a confident and self-assured person or views the world through a lens of shame and doubt about his or abilities will depend a lot on the way you handle things during the potty training stage. Not to put pressure on you as a parent, this is merely a call for lots of patience during the toilet training phase. During and after the training, your child is going to need to be patient and encouraging as she navigates her way through the ever changing world.
